PROLOGUE

*The Overture begins.
It hints of Love and rejection
Hope and adventure.
The spotlight
Brightens me, the Performer.
And I wait
To unravel the depth of my character
Carefully molded by Time, my director.*

*The Audience watches.
I am unsure but courageous
For I've wanted so long to Sing my song
And play the part
I was born to perform.*

Colonnade p. 112
 Co-Editors-in-Chief: Michael Platt
 Matthew Wien
 Advisors: Mr. J. Cosgrove
 Mr. W. Dehn

Colonnade (In case you've yet to realize it, you're reading it) was no meager task, yet through it all, undaunted, we remained jovial. Our minds were often lost, but our sense of humor never ceased. Communication lines were always open between the editors and the staff. All five (or was it six?) of them. Anyway, our appreciation to all who worked.

When weary and hungry we often sought solace in Michael's imported tea or Mr. Dehn's bevy of vitamins which at one time no doubt were used to raise the aura of his feline friends. And dear Cos, "We're checkin' em' boss, we're checkin' em'", Thanks to Mr. Land, and Ron's visits for our monthly thrill.

The team played extremely well as a unit and had the most successful year since the early 1960's, remaining undefeated, clinching first in the division and going on to the South Shore semifinals where they lost what can only be called an overtime heartbreaker. The explosive offense and the strong consistent defense, which yielded only 5 goals in regular season play, were the main reasons for the team's 9-0-3 record. Within the circularity of it all
The cosmic riddle of life and death and life again
Each swan is always a swan with all its beauty and grace
And the blue jay remains a jay
No turtle would try to induce a frog to live his way
Perhaps, therein lies the secret of peaceful coexistence.

EPILOGUE

The stage is empty now.
It echoes past applause
I've gotten through Act one And I'm ready to go on.

The starry eyed dream chaser
The unscrutable sleuth
The villain, the victim
The hero, the clown.
We dream of last night curtain calls
And listen for our cue.

Intermission is over.
The Audience quiets.
The curtain goes up
For the second Act.

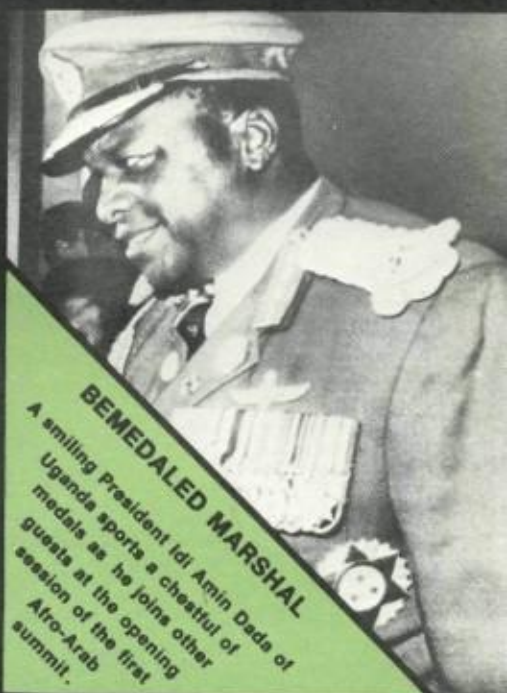

To Mark,
I hope that your future years are treasured with pleasure. I really didn't sit to know you but I wish you the world's amount of luck!
Love Always!
